Mr. E. T. B., Hot Springs, Ark : The arriele that you desired to find on he emposite of young girls receiving men isitors unchaperened did not appear in this department of The Republic, though similar topics have from time to time been enseed in a general manner."

Indicidual cases must always be considered in matters of this kind. The American endency, especially in the West, is inward unchap repel. Hundreds and hundreds of charming and refined young women in Western cities and towns receive men chaperene. I mean that their mothers or elderly women relatives do not make a point of coming into the parior or the pleasant little plazes that is only but chough for a hammona and one chair and staying there until the young man toftener it is young mean has evaled his call.

Every nice, respectful and unucheefly girl. Bles to have her mother, or the sunt with whom she diver, meet her men friends, and chat with them at rane time during an evening call. If the girl is quite young and just through her when days the padd. evening call. If the girl is quite some and all girl through her sensed direct size needs elderly case of manner and elderly corollality from a chapter at to smooth matters along and get her started on make conversational tracks. Very few young girls have the necessary savoir take to entertain a on full of veilers, or even two or three.

As a matter of per smal updates, I incline toward the bell father to very yourse girl should be permitted to emergin men friends not to every lower three to place of any seminal tree many without a compensation of the power of the permitted to the permitted of the permitted of the power. amusement from here window a comper-one, unlesses and here is the point-like man is an old family fromt, the son of intimate friends; or else some youth who is well known in the household, and to be trusted thoroughly. Fudis similate jointing about with young men, many of whom she knows only because "Dorothy" or "Else," or somebody else presented him to her in the candy shop, or on the direct cars, is a distinct call, and one of the greatest menaces that can happen to a young girl's manners and morals.

Season of two, and the man or men have been properly introduced and received by the elders of the household, whether father or mother, or both, then there is no reason in the world why mademoiselle should not be permitted to enterthin him as she pleases with conversation or muse, or cr.bbage-why doesn't somebody revive that delightful game for two? without the presence of a chargeone. The young man is expected to terminate his call before midnight, if it is a call, or to bring home the young woman from the summer garden at a reasonable

Many persons heartly disapprove of a young woman's attendance at theaters and similar anuscinent places with a man alone. If, as I said, the girl is very young, then, let her relatives arrange a little party of four, with an elder sister and sister's flance to go along. If she is not very young and quite level-headed and sensible, then there is no reason in the world why she should not be permitted to accept all pleasant attentions which young men who are known to be respectable and entertaining desire to show her.

But, as I said at first, the individual girl and the particular young man should in every case be considered. Many parents nowadays know far too little of the young people with whom their children associate. Daughter comes home from a trip downtown and gierfully relates that she has just town and gleefully relates that she has just Marie So-and-So, who had Tom Briggs and such a nice fellow Griggs- and "they are all going out to the Highlands some night next week." Mamma takes daughter's word for it that Dick Griggs is a "nice fellow," and they all do go to the gardens. Now it may develop that Tom, who introduced Dick as his friend, knows the latter only in a very superficial way, and therefore has no knowledge of how Dick will comport himself in the presence of young girls who are gentle-women. Dick may spoil the party and dis-grace himself, or he may turn out a gen-uine acquisition, and make a thoroughly nice and pleasant friend for both girls. But the chances are too many-the risks too in the summer. You see them everywhere, the Dicks and Toms with young girls whom they have just met twenty-four hours earlier, or even less. Of course, I'm not speaking of a Dick who is an old college chum of Tom, and whom Tom knows "down to the ground." That puts another light on the matter entirely. It's the chance acquaintance that mamma must look out for. It's largely the chance acquaintance that fig-ures in elopements and otherwise brings unpleasant notoriety, if not real sorrow, to many homes. Vigilance in the matter of daughter's men friends must be every American mother's watchword these days.

introduced last spring in Washington, has reached Newport this summer. Young women of the smart summer colony now go about carrying natty little sticks, monogramed, silver-tipped and ornamented ac-cording to their fancies.

If you want to have an especially fetching little hat for the gardens just now, being somewhat tired of your cherry confection of the early summer, likewise your various shirt walst, "rough-and-readies," which are doing yeoman service, get the little .niiliner round the corner to put together a small affair of white lace for you. Very expensive lace is not at all necessary. An open-work pattern or something rather showy is the most effective to use, and you may have a bit of color on it in the shape of a satin chou or two, as you happen to Summer for the girl who likes to travel out to the gardens with nothing on her dainty locks. The evenings have been too damp, as a rule, and some head covering has been quite necessary. Try the lace hat. If you've a knack, you can cover a small wire frame very easily yourself. But don't attempt it without the "knack." Nothing looks worse than clumsy, homemade articles of headgear and neckwest.

Miss Emily Shields of St. Louis is at pres-Miss Emily Shields of St. Louis is at present a guest in Nashville, at the home of her grandfather, Mr. George W. Shields, and is having many pleasant things cald about her by the Nashvillians. Miss Shields has recently won a scholarship at Bryn Mawr, and, though still in her teens, has evinced studious qualities and a talent for mathematics and history that have given her friends great pride in her achievements. She will remain in Nashville until the late summer, returning to St. Louis to be with her mother, Mrs. W. A. Gilchrist, before entering Bryn Mawr.

Make a girdle of green satin—the Patrick green shade, of course—with two apstanding loops, quite short, in the middle of the back, and ends rather longer, with their edges trimmed round instead of on a siant, as we have been accustomed to see ribbons for generations. The roundness gives variety and is a pleasant little fad for all summer ribbons this year. for all summer ribbons this year SERENA LAMB.

Boston, Mass., July 17.—The dullness which has marked the vacation season up to within a week past has saddenly been dissipated by the hot wave which has teen with us now for several days. A week ago laindlords were pessimistic, now they are abnermally optimistic. Westerners who have until now kept themselves huddled up in sun plazzas to be rid of the fogs and East winds, are much in evidence, and are appearing on the parillions, verandas, drives and on the bathing beaches at the shore resorts gotten up in the latest and most fetching of summer attire.

Bethlehem, situated in the heart of the White Mountains, with grand old Mount Washington in full view, a favorite spot of St. Leuis people, has opened its doors, and the social gaitles are now in full swing.

Lenox at present is very gay on account
